Agitated Radio Pilot is the vehicle for songwriter David Colohan, who might be better known for his role at the Deserted Village label. "World Winding Down" finds Colohan working with a cast of like minded collaborators (including Maja Eliot, Richard Moulton, Sharon Kraus, and Richard Skelton to name just a few) to create a double disc album of songs cycling through a heartfelt range of feelings dealing with loss, acceptance, impermanence, and love.

In a way, World Winding Down is a logical follow-up to 2006's Your Turn To Go it Alone; the main emphasis is again on melancholic songs based on guitar and vocals. However, the role of instrumentals has become bigger, making this album the, for me, perfect synthesis of great songs and beautiful acoustic soundscapes and interludes.

World Winding Down by Agitated Radio Pilot (Album, Singer)

After taking a much-needed break from touring, David composed much of the music on Winding Down over a six week period. Every song is designed with purpose, not only to be melodically pleasing, but also to be melodically surprising. While the overall tone of the album is dark, the music is thoughtful and prayerful.

Now usable energy in this now-fallen universe eventually runs down. Ultimately, only usable energy could come from God as the absolute source, not the universe itself. Sadly, many Christians openly embrace big bang cosmology (that the universe essentially created itself) but argue that God is the one who started the process.
